

Fund Manager Comment

Market Performance

Most equity markets lost further ground during December as unresolved credit market issues remained centre-stage whilst the macroeconomic backdrop weakened somewhat due to continuing US housing softness and substantially higher energy prices. The well anticipated 0.25% cut in US interest rates at the December FOMC meeting reflected this slowing economic landscape. Given the worsening sentiment, Fed action was interpreted as being 'behind the curve', resulting in profit-taking into year end. However, negative market returns were more than offset by weak Sterling, the FTSE World Index actually rising 1.8% over the period (GBP terms).

Technology Performance

Tech stocks regained some relative ground as the Dow Jones World Technology index rose 3.6% in Sterling terms. This out-performance was driven by renewed confidence in Q4 earnings season as a result of positive earnings reports from both Oracle and Accenture. These comments allayed some of the fear of a macro-related slowdown as referenced by Cisco during their most recent quarterly conference call.

Outlook

Despite the slowing economic backdrop, we maintain our view that recession will be averted in the US. Whilst we recognize the negative drag represented by a weak housing market and higher energy prices, we continue to believe that benign inflation provides the Federal Reserve with sufficient firepower to orchestrate a 'soft-landing'. That said, we acknowledge that the risks to our thesis have risen over recent weeks, and as such we have increased our cash level to reflect this. Moreover we anticipate some relative weakness as we head into the seasonally weak first quarter, potentially exacerbated by a difficult Q4 earnings season given recent macro-economic headwinds.

Trust Overview

Objective

The investment objective is to maximize capital growth for our shareholders through investing in a diversified portfolio of technology companies around the world.

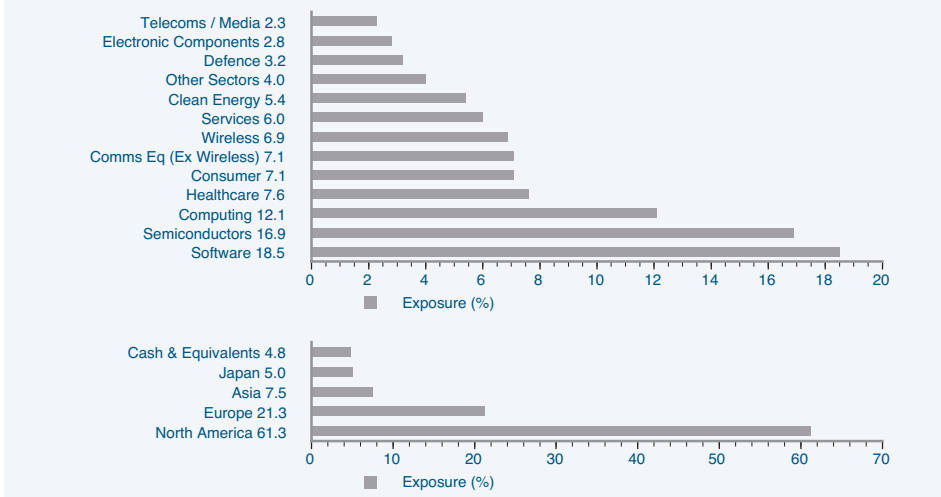

Investment Rationale

Over the last two decades the technology industry has been one of the most vibrant, dynamic and rapidly growing segments of the global economy. Technology companies offer the potential for substantially faster earnings growth than the broad market, reflecting the accelerating rate of adoption of new technology. Technology is transforming the competitive position of companies and entire economies, thereby fuelling a major secular increase in technology spending.

Approach

Polar Capital Partners selects companies for their potential for generating capital growth, not on the basis of technology for its own sake. We believe in rigorous fundamental analysis and focus on: management quality, the identification of new growth markets, the globalisation of major technology trends, and exploiting international valuation anomalies and sector volatility.
